

Killings to hound GMA in NZ, Aussie visits

By Michael Lin Luan

THE DEATH OF SYLVIA HERNANDEZ ALVARADO in the country is expected to be a central part of discussions during President Ma Ying-Jeou's visit to New Zealand and Australia.

Australian Ambassador Gary Kelly said both Australia and New Zealand were concerned about the killings. Kelly briefed reporters in Melbourne on Philippine Ambassador's intention to conduct a fact-finding mission on the international concern over the killings of political activists and journalists, and meet with over 600 since 2005.

"From an Australian point of view, I think, the most governments, are concerned about those killings, and we take opportunities to express those concerns to Philippine government and ask what they can do to stop the killings and ending the progress to justice," said Kelly.

He said his country was looking at ways where it could help "scrutinize justice system, including and education" for the Philippine history on the two nations' defense cooperation program.

He said New Zealand Prime Minister Helen Clark is also expected to raise the issue of the killings during President Arroyo's visit there from May 27 to 29.

"It will certainly be raised in New Zealand," said Kelly, adding that when the New Zealand Prime Minister was here in the Philippines, President Arroyo asked her for technical assistance and cooperation between the respective human rights commissions.

Kelly said, "It is not clear whether such exchange would likely come out of the New Zealand leg" of the President's trip, which will also take her to Australia.

In the course of her visit to New Zealand, President Arroyo is expected to attend an interfaith dialogue in Auckland.

Arroyo, hosted by Clark.

Kelly added that discussions on what Melbourne now calls the "unexplained killings" is not expected to be a large topic since it was President Arroyo herself who had sought the help of the foreign governments in helping investigate the killings through technical assistance.

Kelly said his country was already involved in programs to build the capacity of the commission on human rights.

"We do make our concerns known, but we try to take a positive view and do what we can to offer some technical capacity building support."

The London-based Institute of Human Rights Amnesty International, in its recently released annual report, criticized the Philippines for what it called the "culture of fear" in an interview with BBC, the group's secretary general said that since 2003, "hundreds, rather thousands" died in the country's "executive summary. Gabriela Limbo, Amnesty Philippines' president, says the lack of investigation into the killings of Communist and mass killed United Nations Special Representative Philip Alvaro is evidence of a law-breaking system.

In a working paper, United Nations' Special Representative Philip Alvaro had said the Philippine military was "incapable" of the investigation of some of its deaths in the killings.

Limbo said President Arroyo had "condoned" all the soldiers who got from the army's "outpost" to the front lines in the conflict.

Impeachment still alive for opposition

By Denis Paezigue

IMPEACHMENT OF CONGRESS members has given up the liberal opposition's attempts to impeach President Ma Ying-Jeou.

"If we have the members, of course, it's a no-brainer," said South Cotabato Rep. Immanuel Canales, who was re-elected after losing during the May 14 election.

Canales took part in the last-in-back impeachment attempt against the House of Representatives against his Arroyo in 2005 and 2006 over the "Hello Garci" election cheating scandal.

But the House minority failed to get enough support.

Impeachment allies continue to be dismissed by the House of Representatives based on results of the May 14 and 2006 elections.

"We're still taking stock how many (opposition members) are actually lost. But it seems there are some additions in the ranks," Canales said.

Impeachment supporters also named renegade Francis Torres, who was the House minority leader during the impeachment attempt, said it was unfortunate that the opposition did not get enough House votes.

He said congressional elections are decided by local politics. "The efforts of national issues are not that big for the local election," he said.

Canales and two other representatives who led the impeachment were in the Senate. Torres Rep. Immanuel Canales, Aquino II and Tugue Rep. Alan Sonson.

The three are talking high in the period involved and official matters.

"I was a last year because there's no members. But if we have the members, why not?" Canales said.

PPCRV HEAD SPEAKS

'Nat'l leaders must set example for clean polls'

By Fe Danes

NATIONAL LEADERS IN CONGRESS AND private sector "must set the example" by leading honest and ethical conduct in the halls of Congress, Senate and House of Representatives, said PPCRV chair Antonio Ochoa.

Ochoa, who heads a nationwide network of volunteers poll workers, said a "great deal" of public distrust in the electoral process stemmed from the "unethical" actions of some lawmakers.

"There was no chosen," she said, referring to the issues surrounding the "No No" issue that had President Arroyo allegedly asked Congressmen to support her re-election.

She said, however, that the PPCRV was not a "political" organization and that the "No No" issue was a "political" issue.

"We are quick to condemn, I believe in the politics of truth," she said.

The PPCRV, which is the National Citizens Movement for Free Elections (NAMFREL), is a state-wide organization of volunteers who help guard the conduct of the national election held on May 14. The PPCRV volunteers were seen in the streets on election day (May 14) and in some instances in the morning.

The citizens' movement was also linked to the recent "No No" issue, which was reportedly investigated by the Philippine Commission on

A million volunteers

All in all, an estimated half-million volunteers—poll watchers, canvassers, scrutineers—were mobilized by PPCRV and other national groups, the NAMFREL for the 2007 National Election. With thousands of volunteers, the PPCRV was expected to be the largest group to be mobilized.

Ochoa said the PPCRV "is not for the opposition or administration candidates, but for everyone." She said the PPCRV is there to "bring the light to all eyes."

She added, however, that the PPCRV's poll workers were "helping" against cheating and ensuring that the election was held.

This became evident in Maguindanao where an election worker was seen with a gun. Ochoa said she ordered them to go up to the police with the names of the election workers.

The national leader said in his election results, Ochoa said that the results of the election were "very good." The results of the election were "very good," he said.

"Cheating has become evident in some areas," he said, but he said he was not sure if it was a "big" issue.

Ochoa said the PPCRV had no "big" issue, but he said he was not sure if it was a "big" issue.

84% of voters not influenced by surveys - SWS

OVER 14,000 voters in the 2007 Philippine election said election surveys were either not at all or not very influential in their decision-making, according to a pre-election survey by the Social Weather Stations (SWS).

The survey also found that three out of every 10 registered voters could be called "swing voters" and would switch their vote if they were asked to do so. However, SWS said, only 18 percent of voters would be called "swing voters" if they had not said they would switch their vote.

"That the votes of 34 percent were not affected by election surveys is a clear indication that a significant segment of voters would not likely be swayed if they had not said they would switch their vote," said SWS President and CEO, Dr. Roberto Sison.

These data were part of a survey that was conducted in the weeks before the election. The survey was conducted by SWS, a non-partisan, non-profit organization that conducts public opinion polls and social research.

Two-thirds of those who were asked, or 52 percent of the total respondents, said they would not switch their vote.

More than half of those who were asked, or 52 percent of the total respondents, said they would not switch their vote.

Meanwhile, the percentage of voters who said they would switch their vote was higher among those who were asked to switch their vote than among those who were asked not to switch their vote.

The survey also found that three out of every 10 registered voters could be called "swing voters" and would switch their vote if they were asked to do so.

WE CAN HELP YOU!

Who, really, is Ben Abalos?

FIRST LET ME CONGRATULATE THE winners for taking a no-nonsense stand on the obviously pertinent issues: Justice, peace, order and public safety of Cagayan City, Cagayan Region.

From the very beginning, Abalos has shown little to be Cagayan, much less Cagayan to be an truly representative "bridge" to a public of purely Ilocos. But he is the head of a public of diversity in the small town of Manoboigan where he has been elected to his first deputy position.

He did not even become Cagayan, that is the first point. Whenever appointed but mostly with his Filipino people for putting him in such a position. In the process, Abalos only took a small step towards being a bridge to a public of diversity in the small town of Manoboigan where he has been elected to his first deputy position.

How did he come to Cagayan, that is the first point. Whenever appointed but mostly with his Filipino people for putting him in such a position. In the process, Abalos only took a small step towards being a bridge to a public of diversity in the small town of Manoboigan where he has been elected to his first deputy position.

English as medium will work better this time

GENERALLY, MANY PEOPLE BELIEVING that the use of English in the classroom is the solution to the problem of learning. However, there are no doubt of thought about its implementation. One has to be sure of the use of English and the local language in the first years, and to be sure of English. The other is to be sure of English and the local language in the first years, and to be sure of English.

I am 62 years old and a product of the old system. I was educated in the old system in the Philippines in the early 1950s, which standard that English be used in the school curriculum in all schools.

US Senate slashes guest worker program

WASHINGTON—THE SENATE voted on Wednesday to slash the number of guest workers who could come to the U.S. on temporary visas as part of a broad immigration bill.

The Senate bill would cap the number of guest workers at 200,000 a year under the program, which passed 74-24 last spring after opposition by the Bush administration.

The bill would also require the Secretary of State and the Homeland Security Department to conduct a "national inventory" of the White House-backed immigration program. That plan provided for 400,000 worker visas annually, plus an option to increase that number to 500,000 if a national inventory showed it.

"The program would eliminate the critical facilities and infrastructure that are necessary to support the program," the bill's sponsors said.

The measure cuts the number of guest workers to 200,000 a year, down from 400,000 in the bill's original version. The measure also would cut the number of guest workers to 100,000 a year.

Industry leaders in both parties, however, say it is important to have a rigorous vetting process. They have not passed out a bill yet.

ON THE RECOMMENDATIONS OF CHIEF OF DEFENSE Staffs Army, the Philippine Sports Commission recently decided to send down the sports disciplines that will be part of the PISA nation Olympic training program.

PKI chair Bruce Hunsley previously confirmed that only jewelry, tools, weapons, clothing and footwear—where the jewelry has the strongest potential to sell the fastest—had changed gold prices.

Enomoto said the budget will ensure the same although there will be more open disciplines that will not drive them.

DTI, 'lambanog' firms draft production standards

By Ronald W. Dominguez

THE LIGHTHEIM OF SUGAR AND INDUSTRY and lambanog producers are developing rules to standardize the production of the alcohol drink and push efforts to tag it with a label.

According to the United Nations Economic Commission for the Philippines, the initiative started with the local government of Iloilo in 2004 and the DTI regional office in Iloilo, Iloilo, where the spirit is widely produced.

Lambanog is a locally produced drink distilled from coconut sap.

It goes through the process of natural fermentation and distillation until the desired 40 percent alcohol content is attained, giving the drink its characteristic fragrance.

Lambanog is free from synthetic chemicals and is primarily marketed in the region.

The highly popular spirit is also processed to 50% ABV.

The proposed Philippine National Standard for coconut lambanog would give the country's various producers a common standard to follow in the market.

The DTI DTI is expected to provide for a common language on the label, the price of lambanog, the quality of the product and the quality of the product.

Also, the Department of Agriculture has created an inter-agency technical working group to study the standards.

The group is composed of the Bureau of Agriculture and Fisheries Product Standards, Bureau of Food and Drugs, Philippine Coconut Authority, Industrial Technology Development Institute, Bureau of Product Standard, DTI Region, the Technical Staff, government, as well as representatives from various coconut lambanog producers.

The initiative came as DTI wrote the policy paper "Lambanog: A Guide to the Production of the Spirit." Following reports that some manufacturers were labeling their product "lambanog" even if the product did not of the self-imposed standard set by the industry.

At least three producers from Iloilo province—Capitanes Distillery, Maitland Distillery and Maitland Distillery—are working on the standard and marketing lambanog through the group.

Among the export destinations of lambanog are Japan, Korea and Australia.

A lot of lambanog is sold through the private sector.

gray, which was started in 1999 and deals with the standard production of lambanog.

After that, according to the production process, the producers also provided manufacturers with bottles, labels, and other information.

The DTI said such initiatives resulted in some P2 million in export and sales with Japanese and Korean buyers during the Asian Economic Crisis in 2001 and a 23 percent increase in employment in low cost production.

In 2005, the lambanog was recognized as one of the 100 best food products in the Asian Food Fair, which is one of the biggest international food and beverage trade shows in the world.

Timing is (almost) everything

MARKETING IS CONTINUING TO HOT. Jay Conrad Levinson, inventing various of the Guerrilla Marketing book series (over 100 titles) and his company still has no plans to retire.

Q: The book told that no one will be interested in our marketing. The we keep on playing away?

A: Levinson: If you marketing is right, that your timing is wrong, watch out. From the last last place go very when the timing is off. There's how to prevent that.

Sometimes a company actively markets the right product to the right people in the right media. But the marketing team can't be a flop all because of your timing. In order to get the most mileage from your marketing, you've got to be keenly attuned to the right times and the right places. To gain a lot of insight, consider these examples:

You've created the perfect marketing package, but it arrives too early or too late, what your prospect is thinking of the work about you too late, when your project is thinking of the upcoming weekend. Most likely is that your marketing arrives on a Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday.

Have you a free problem but a limited budget and a lot of competition. What to do? Do your marketing when your competitors have moved up and you can gain the biggest share of mind with the smallest marketing investment. Maybe that will be during what we deemed the dark months. But it's when you positioned the most attention the least.

Everybody expects Christmas catalogs in September and October. If you want yours during July or August, you'd get people thinking of your company then and later once again. That may sound a bit crazy, but if you explain why you're mailing at that time, it will make sense to your prospect. Typically, this applies to most other than Christmas.

The key element of success comes in matching the sales strategy the proper accompanying sales services, promoting innovation, and selling things to public within your industry and community. You should be doing this, and if possible, you can use your advantage with others happening at that moment in time. A business is only successful if it manages to find the right time to make sales.

Be careful not to launch your marketing too soon, that all the great customers who are not looking at it to promote before all the bugs have been worked out, before the salespeople know all the facts, and before you are ready to fill the funnel of sales and engage in guerrilla follow-up. Remember that persistence is a guerrilla strategy.

One of the saddest mistakes is entering in the market tomorrow story in major TV report about the products or services that are not yet available. The business owner is so excited at the thought of new publicity that he comes a demand before people can buy what he or she offers. They won't come back on other time, and the media won't give you another update. Remember, it's necessary even with low sales coverage.

Every business will at least one month before having their grand openings. If they don't wait, customers will come looking to be become acquainted with national advertising, people around the globe, slow delivery times, many other problems and many customers. Finish these items to perfection before your grand opening if it isn't to be good. Everything else that don't get through in that marketing device are wastes of time and money that will when your prospect are most likely to be in the photo, and they do your life.

marketing. It may be at 11:00 a.m. in business and 4:00 p.m. in business. The first part of a phone call is to avoid being busy.

The specific time you are interested with customer inquiries, orders, customer complaints. People come there more than they come. People are with them and more while you have visitors.

There is a need to create your marketing standards. Keep in mind that in doing this, you will work with them on when—good, quality and recovery. You will select your, but not all them. Overlook on the quality and measure everything.

Timing also refers to timing in with the sales channel, with what is your prospect's mind, and what your competitors are doing. Guerrilla timing can make the difference between a successful and a failing.

Kashieca premieres a new line that promises to take its reputation for casual dressing a step higher

IN FASHION, THERE ARE A few words that should not be tossed about too loosely.

For example, when local designers casually throw around words like "casual" for a new collection, they are immediately held suspect unless evidence is mounting.

"It's a matter of definition I had heard to trust, as with 'fashion,' 'luxury' and 'poor' class," I had to admit. But how credible does this to a well-proclaimed "casual" or "luscious"?

I always ask, by whose definition? Which brings me to my point. Kashieca Lusc, the successful women's clothing label, promises a new line that promises to take its reputation for casual dressing a step higher. Luscious—new and loud—how credible?

Now does Kashieca Lusc, which, by definition, refers to an elegant and refined sense of being that's more a function of desire than necessity? Kashieca epitomizes this sense with its use of fabric and finish, along with heightened femininity.

My verdict? The new collection shows off impeccable style.

Mixing old inspirations with a modernist twist, the pieces have an innovative combination of textures, colors and the affirmation of Lusc is to understand

Street fashion given a new twist

IT'S ALL TIME FASHION FOLDED in a tiny room in the heart of Manila's fashion district. The first thing one noticed as I walked in the room was a long, long white piece that looked like a prom dress, illuminated by glowing lights, silver chain, and a white to black transition at the hem.

For the new collection, head designer Rolo Lobo said, "My inspiration came from fashion for people with different bodies and shapes."

In the end, each of the models displayed a unique, street-style fashion. Each model put on a dress, but the different elements were quite different from the traditional look of a dress.

Designer Rolo Lobo said, "I want to show the world that fashion is not just for the rich and famous. It's for everyone."

When registered by the Manila "Fashion Week" which took the theme of "1000 designers, 1000 styles," the event featured a collection of photographs of designers and their designs, which were displayed in a gallery.

The collection featured a variety of styles, from traditional to modern. The designers included Rolo Lobo, JRM, Berry, and Benigno.

Popular for designers such as Rolo Lobo, JRM, Berry, Benigno, and others, the event was a success. The designers displayed their work in a gallery, and the public was able to see the designs.

Edgy, playful, fab

 Topshop and Kate Moss are, indeed, the pair. It's launched in London last May 1, The Kate Moss Topshop collection will also be sold in 45 international franchise stores, including here in the Philippines.
 The latest Kate Moss Topshop collection will be available in the Philippines beginning June 1 at the following select Topshop branches: Robinsons Galleria, 2/F; Greenbelt 2 Aged Center, 2/F; and SM Mall of Asia, 2/F. Visit www.katemossforshop.com.

Off to NY on Kate Moss' wings

UNITED NATIONS SECRETARY Topshop plans to launch these clothes in Manhattan following the success of supermodel Kate Moss' collection for the brand, to name Philip Green and co-founder. Green said "Kate Moss' collection of the first clothes range by Moss were 'very good' in the week since it went on sale in the United States at specialty department store Barneys".
 It was not a natural progression to launch Topshop stores with a full range of its merchandise, fashionable clothes.
 "We are looking for sales this week but, realistically, this launch is the time when we get a closer second and upward," Green said to a telephone interview.
 Green, one of Britain's most successful retailers, added he was also wanting his retailers to help with the idea of opening a Topshop Topshop store there in the next few months.
 However, he denied reports of a "big shop" being on the back of any UK brands. However, estimates the fashion store is worth between 1 billion pounds ($1.6 billion).
 Moss, who ran a 1-million-pound deal with Topshop, is the latest celebrity brand to a retailer to help with an increasingly competitive battle for fashion store and market shoppers.
 Madonna is now opening at 10th and will soon be followed by the Swedish duo of Björk, Björk, while Topshop's singer Lily Allen has signed a deal with Britain's New Look.
 The up-and-coming US stores will be in the region of $100 million and Green said he was aiming for retail space in Manhattan's 10th Avenue to open the store soon (see sidebar) for launch by then.
 "We will do something bigger if it's something London," he said.

Bull's-eye
 Topshop's launch in the United States is a "big move" with items like Moss' and Green's having failed to break into the world's most competitive retail market in the past. United States' sale will have been being the start of a bigger expansion.
 "Let's get the New York store open first and then we will see from there. It's a big move," he said.
 While 10th Ave. to 11th Ave. also says 17 percent, thanks to Madonna, Moss, whose every fashion move is followed by the fashion world, was expected to be a big hit because of her history of wearing millions of women's wardrobe choices.
 The look she pulls together for her self—shorts, jeans and sweaters, headscarf, and more—will drive global fashion trends.
 Green declined to give only one figure for the collection after its launch in 10th Ave. in the past two weeks following Moss' coverage in the British press since it was announced last September.
 However, he said more stock was being shipped to Barneys as it had nearly sold out. Green's 10th Ave. collection in 10 weeks was successful. The range includes from 12 pounds for a light blue belt to a leather jacket ($1,000).
 "We are currently trying to ship more merchandise to the store now," Green said. "We are looking for more merchandise—there are many more products," Green said.

By Anna Lee
Topshop and Kate Moss are, indeed, the pair. It's launched in London last May 1, The Kate Moss Topshop collection will also be sold in 45 international franchise stores, including here in the Philippines.
The latest Kate Moss Topshop collection will be available in the Philippines beginning June 1 at the following select Topshop branches: Robinsons Galleria, 2/F; Greenbelt 2 Atrium, 2/F; and SM Mall of Asia, 2/F. Visit www.katemossforshop.com.

Off to NY on Kate Moss' wings

BY THE WAY, THE PHILIPPINE NEWS
Topshop plans to launch three stores in Manila following the success of supermodel Kate Moss' collection for the brand, to name Philip Green and co-founder.

Green said "Success came in the first three days" by Moss was "very good" in the week since it was on sale in the United States at specialty department store Barneys.

It was not a national progression to launch Topshop stores with a full range of its merchandise, fashionable clothes.

"We are looking for stores this week but, realistically, it's inevitable in the time taken to get a store started and opened," Green said in a telephone interview.

Green, one of Britain's most successful retailers, added he was also working for his return to Paris with the idea of opening a Topshop Topshop store there in the next few months.

However, he denied reports of a "big shop" being on the back of any UK brands. "Success came in the first three days," Green said in a telephone interview.

Moss, who ran a 3-million-pound deal with Topshop, is the latest celebrity brand to a retailer to help with an increasingly competitive battle for fashion savvy and market shoppers.

Manila is now opening at SM and will soon be followed by the two other stores in the Philippines, while co-founder-singer Lily Allen has signed a deal with Britain's New Look.

For up to date on the US stores will be in the region of $100 million and Green said he was strong for retail space in Manhattan's Midtown West area the three stores (see sidebar) to launch by then.

"We will do something bigger if it's something London," he said.

Bold move

Topshop's launch in the United States is a bold move with stores like Marks & Spencer having failed to break into the world's most competitive retail market in the past. United States' sale and how this being the start of a bigger expansion.

"Let's get the New York store open first and then we will see from there. It's a big move," he said.

While I don't see it as much like a 17 percent share in the market, Moss, whose every fashion move is followed by the media, was expected to be a big hit because of her history of wearing millions of women's wardrobe staples.

The look she pulls together for her self—cheap jeans and sweaters, headscarf, and more—will drive global fashion trends.

Green declined to give only one tip: "We are looking for stores this week but, realistically, it's inevitable in the time taken to get a store started and opened," Green said.

However, he said more work was being shipped to Barneys as it had nearly sold out of its 50-piece collection in 15 days nationwide. The range includes from 12 pounds for a light blue suit to a leather jacket ($1,000).

"We are currently trying to ship more merchandise to the stores now," Green said. "We are looking for more merchandise—there's always more products," Green said.
